Bringing Digital Opportunity to Our Community

Want to be part of an exciting campaign that is connecting people to digital opportunity all across America?

Then join with (name of your center) to help give kids and families in (name of community or area) access to computer technology, jobs, and lifelong learning.

The (name of your center) at (street address) is one of many Neighborhood Networks centers nationwide, and they need volunteers and local businesses to support valuable center programs and services.

HUD's Neighborhood Networks centers are ideal partners for employers, educators, healthcare providers, schools, seniors groups, state or local government agencies, and nonprofit and faith-based organizations that want to help everyone in the community take advantage of current technology. Some centers have teachers and other professionals volunteer to help residents with job training, literacy, GED courses, or other enrichment programs, but all of them would feel privileged to have YOU volunteer a few hours a week.

For more information about volunteering or becoming a partner with the (name of your center), call (center contact info). To learn more about the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's Neighborhood Networks Initiative, call (888) 312-2743 or log on to the Web site at www.NeighborhoodNetworks.org.
